V. Read. Choose the correct answers.

It is not easy to work in the fragrance industry. Perfumers need an extraordinary sense of smell and a solid knowledge of chemistry, in addition to completing specialist studies in perfumery. Normally, it takes ten years of studies and training to be recruited a professional perfumer. Some consider perfumers as experts in chemistry and gas chromatography. In fact, they must be able to analyze chemical substances that form the additives in the fragrance and make detailed analysis of aromatic chemicals, as well as perform physical tests. At higher levels, they also take quality control measures and get involved in the preparation of a fragrance to make sure that the manufacturing process conforms to safety standards.

As any other jobs, a perfumer may encounter challenges at work. It may be the problem of low engagement. Consumers do not engage in the perfume industry as much as they used to, because many brands focus on producing commonplace fragrances in large quantities. This results in the same products from different brands, or market saturation. As a result, perfumers are required to work harder to create their brands' signature fragrances.

Becoming a perfumer is a career choice. It thrusts you into an incredible world of unexpected, original and timeless scents. It also gives you a chance to let your creativity and imagination run wild as you develop fragrances that may become global success.
