It's important to preserve our heritage and culture. It can be appreciated by foreign tourists and local people. What should we do to protect our historic buildings and statues?

I think the government should be responsible for preserving our heritage. They can make laws to protect our heritage. There should be enough government money to pay for preserving old buildings. The government should organize the repair of old buildings. Visitors should pay when they visit them. The money they collect can be used to pay to preserve historical sites.

Tourists should be asked not to touch historical buildings and statues. If tourists damage them, the government should make them pay for it. Visitors shouldn't take things away. The government should punish them if they do. Old buildings can be listed as protected. They must be protected from companies. The government shouldn't let private companies knock them down. They should pass laws to stop this.

Local people should know about their heritage. They can promote historical places. They can be promoted in newspapers. Special websites could be set up. Local people should be encouraged to visit. Children can learn about their heritage in school. Schools can organize school trips. They should make more TV shows about our country's heritage. People will learn more about them and visit them.

These are some of the things we should do to help protect our heritage. People can encourage the government to spend more to protect our old buildings. We will attract more visitors if we protect our heritage. Our country will be more famous around the world. Local people will be proud of their heritage.
